Description:

The William Duley House and Smokehouse was previously surveyed by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission in 1974 and 1983. There have been no additions to the house or smoke house since the time of the prior survey. The asbestos siding has been completely removed from the exterior of the house and the original German wood siding has been restored. The property also contains one carriage house, one barn and two additional outbuildings, in addition to the smokehouse located south of the house. One outbuilding to the west of the smokehouse has been based on an old photograph. The prior survey form mentions the foundation of a milk shed south of the smokehouse. It is possible that this reconstructed building is at the location of the old milk shed. The outbuilding has a hipped roof of asphalt shingles, German wood siding and a concrete foundation. To the east is a rebuilt pumphouse. The original metal pumphouse building was replaced with a wood-frame building. The gable roof of the pumphouse is covered with asphalt shingles and the walls are covered with German wood siding. The two barns on the property are located to the south of the smokehouse, and separated from the shed and outbuilding by a paved parking area. The carriage house has a side-gable roof covered with corrugated metal. The exterior is covered with board-and-batten siding and the foundation is concrete block. The elevation which faces the house has four wagon entryways. Three of the four openings have been enclosed with double hinged doors. The second story has two 9/9 double-hung windows and a door. To the west of the carriage house is a bank barn with a concrete foundation. The side-gable roof is covered with standing seam metal and the walls are wood board-and-batten.

National Register Evaluation:

The William Duley House and Smokehouse, constructed circa 1820 with a large addition constructed circa 1870, is eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C, as an example of evolving nineteenth century building types. The rear wing, constructed circa 1820, retains original features such as a winding boxed stair and fireplace. The main block, added to the rear wing circa 1870, has character-defining features such as a central entrance, symmetrical fenestration pattern, dual interior chimneys, molded cornice with returns and molded window surrounds. In addition, the William Duley House and Smokehouse retains good site integrity, despite a reduction in the property acreage resulting in the change of property function from agricultural to suburban. The property contains a mid-nineteenth century smokehouse and later outbuildings including a carriage house and barn.

The property is not eligible under Criterion A, as research conducted indicates no association with any historic events or trends significant in the development of national, state or local history. Historic research indicates that the property has no association with persons who have made specific contributions to history, and therefore, it does not meet Criterion B. Based upon the date of construction and the property type, there is a likelihood that an archaeological component could exist on the property. However, as no archaeological investigation has been conducted, the eligibility of the property under Criterion D cannot be assessed at this time.

The William Duley House is a two part frame dwelling located on a hill at the intersection of Route 382 (Croom Road) and Croom Station Road. The main block, a 2-story, 5 bay by 2 bay structure, dates from the late nineteenth century. It faces northwest. An earlier (early nineteenth century), 1-1/2 story, 3 bay by 1 bay wing extends from the center of the rear elevation of the main block and is of heavy timber frame construction filled with brick nogging. The wing measures approximately 26 x 20 feet. Both sections have gable roofs covered with asphalt shingles. The present owners have removed the asbestos shingles which covered the walls of the house and are repairing the original German siding. The house rests on a tamped footing brick foundation. There are four brick chimneys, adorned with corbelled caps.

The main block has a central stair hall with one room on either side plan. The chimneys are located on either side of the stairs and have fireplaces which face into the two rooms. The fireplace in the southwest room has a marbelized slate mantel.

The wing consists of one room which has a fireplace at the northwest end. Two doors flank the fireplace: one leads into the southeast room of the main block and the other into the stairhall. A boxed staircase with a tight winder, leading to the half story, is located in the south corner of the wing.

There are two outbuildings and 2 barns associated with this site and the foundations of a stable, milkhouse, and icehouse are visible.

Of special note is the smokehouse which is located just east of the house. It measures 10' 2" square and has a pryamidal roof covered with decorative pressed metal. It, like the meathouse at the Mullikin/Bowie House (#74A-8), is constructed very securely, to prevent thievery, with 2-1/2 x 3-3/4" studs set 9 inches apart.

The William Duley House consists of two parts: a 26 x 20 foot, 1-1/2 story wing which was constructed between 1800 and 1822 by Judson Scott, and the 2-story main-block which was built by William Duley between 1873 and 1897. Also associated with the site is an early to mid-nineteenth century smokehouse. These structures are significant architecturally because of their association with the prominent Prince George's County families of Scott and Sasscer. This site is also important for its association with one of the earliest commercial ventures in the County, a grist and sawmill operation on the Charles Branch, initiated in the late eighteenth century by the Beanes, Clagette and Smiths and continued into the nineteenth century by the tts and Sasscers. Furthermore, the location, during the late 19th century, of the Popes Creek Branch of the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad (Penn Central), through the nucleus of this commercial area can be attributed to the influence and business pursuits of these prominent families.

The William Duley House is a two part frame dwelling located on a hill at the intersection of Route 382 (Croom Road) and Croom Station Road. An earlier (early nineteenth century), 1-1/2 story, 3 bay by 1 bay wing extends from the center of the rear elevation of the main block and is of heavy timber frame construction filled with brick nogging.¹ The wing measures approximately 26 x 20 feet.

Both sections have gable roofs covered with asphalt shingles. The roofline of the main block flairs slightly at the eaves. The wing has two shed porches which extend along both the southwest (screened in)² and northeast (enclosed) elevations. Both elevations have dormer windows which pierce the roof at the half-story level. The one on the southwest elevation has a segmental arched window and is earlier than the other. A bay window, added later, extends from the southeast gable end of the wing.

The present owners have removed the asbestos shingles which covered the walls of the house and are repairing the original German siding. The house rests on a tamped footing brick foundation. The wing has a 19 x 14 foot dug basement which is entered from the southeast gable end. In the northeast corner of the basement there is an opening into a rounded brick-lined storage area (exact function is unknown).

There are four brick chimneys, adorned with corbelled caps. There are two interior ones located in the center of the main block; another where the main block meets the wing; and the fourth rises along the rear, southeast elevation of the main block and the northeast end where the main block abuts the enclosed shed porch of the wing.

The windows are 2/2 sash with plain board surrounds; however, traces of more elaborate window head moldings can be seen now that the asbestos shingle siding has been removed. The owners plan to restore these as well. The attic story of both gable ends in the main block have a segmental arch window with a lancet arch head.

The main block has a central entrance which consists of a door with raised arch panels, surmounted by a three-pane transom and flanked by sidelights. A one-story, one-bay wide porch has been removed. The wing has a central entrance on the southwest elevation. This elevation is covered by the screened in shed porch which is supported by turned posts with ornate jig-sawn brackets. There is another entrance, more commonly used, located on the southeast elevation of the wing into the enclosed porch at the northeast end.

Summary Paragraph

The William Duley House consists of two parts: a 26 x 20 foot, 1-1/2 story wing which was constructed between 1800 and 1822 by Judson Scott, and the 2-story main-block which was built by William Duley between 1873 and 1897. Furthermore, the location, during the late 19th century, of the Popes Creek Branch of the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad (Penn Central), through the nucleus of this commercial area can be attributed to the influence and business pursuits of these prominent families.

History and Support

Judson Scott for whom the earlier portion of the house was built, married into the Clagett family upon his marriage in 1785 to Eleanor Calgett, granddaughter of the Rev. Thomas John Clagett.¹ In 1800, Scott obtained a 259-1/2 acre portion of "Croome" from Dr. Colmore Beanes for 2,225 pounds. The Rev. Thomas John Clagett and Joseph Smith also owned portions of "Croome." With this purchase, Scott bought into a 1/2 interest of a grist mill, located on Charles Branch (shared with Joseph Smith), and a 1/3 interest in a nearby sawmill (shared with Joseph Smith and the Rev. Thomas Clagett).²

In 1822, Judson Scott died and a commission was appointed to "adjudge and determine" if his estate could be divided. In the records of the sale of the property, it is referred to as the same property on which Judson Scott lived.³ It is therefore probable that the wing of the William Duley House was the dwelling of Scott and was constructed between 1800 and 1822.

The foundations of the milkhouse are situated just south of the smokehouse.

Footnotes

¹ This construction was discovered by the present owner during renovation in September 1983.

² This porch was removed during renovation in September 1983. The present owners have a historic photograph which predates the addition of the porch. They plan to restore the wing to the appearance depicted in the photograph.

8. Continued

The property was purchased in 1822 by Mackall Skinner Cox who was the highest bidder at the public sale of Judson Scott's estate. In 1828, it was conveyed to Zadock Sasscer, who had actually purchased the property for Mackall Cox. Sasscer petitioned the Judge of Prince George's County requesting that the property be conveyed to him, Cox assented and Sasscer received the property in addition to several thousand dollars worth of Cox's personal property to repay the debt.⁴

In 1840 Zadock conveyed the property to Susanna Cox, who in turn conveyed it back to him in 1844. The property passed into Zadock Jr's hands upon his father's death in 1859 and was sold at public sale to Enoch G. Duley and William W. Duley in 1873, after the death of Zadock Jr.⁵

Upon the death of William W. Duley in 1897, the property was sold at a public sale to Edward H. Garner. The main block of the house appears to have been added during William Duley's ownership. The house and outbuildings remained in the Garner family until 1983 when it was sold to the present owners, Robert and Rachel Brown.⁶
